In the city of Massa, where everyone ate their meals at huge tables, the people lived in peace and had fun by singing songs together. One day, a whisper started to circulate in the city. Rumor has it that a stranger came to the city and spoke a language no one had ever heard before. No one understood what he said, and whether he understood them or not. He found the city strange and became afraid. What he said sounded like it belonged to a magician muttering incantations rather than daily conversations. Soon, people realized that things were changing in the city and not in a good way. Who was this stranger? Was he a witch, a wizard, or someone with bad luck?
