In this novel, the author takes her readers on a journey through the shelves of bookstores and libraries and writes the story in the language of books.

It was an adventure book with no name. It only called itself 'Adventure'. Because it had neither a cover nor imprint pages. Nevertheless, it was loved by its first owners, read with interest despite its shortcomings, and carefully preserved. Then, like many other second-hand books, it found its way to the Second Chance Bookstore. In this small, charming shop of Can, the owner who talks with books, she met new friends and different types of books. Her world expanded with book's gaze, dreams, and thoughts. After time spent with cats, visitors, and Can's endless love of books, Adventure had another chance. A new second chance that opened the way for new experiences... A multi-layered story of friendship awaits you as you look at life, people, and reading through the eyes of books.
